Clark, F. C. Hendershott and Frederick Nicholas. The editorials trace the history of t he bill, point out that the question is of national importance, and that it is not the result of any movement on the part of the city itself. The pending measure is of vastly greater significance than any similar measure affecting another city. What is done in Washington may be considered as representing the national policy. The bill proposes legislation radically different from the present settled policies of the country. It proposes public ownership by vote of Congress in a district where the residents have no voice to decide whether or not the innovation shall be introduced. It proposes legislation in the conspicuous capital of the country on a subject that is primarily a function of state or municipal government. Such a step might be of far reaching effect. For some years following the exhaustive report on municipal ownership published by the National Civic Federation in 1907, little was heard in this country about the municipal ownership of electric railways. The agitation in Washington does not come from the public but is an exotic brought in by a few congressmen, who have no property interest at stake in the District and who wish to exploit their ideas at the expense of the taxpayers. GENERAL 910--Promotion and Growth of Business. Electrical Supply In Greater London, by Commercial Agent Erwin W. Thompson. Daily Consular and...
