That your boat, as it crosses the waters of life, may guide you as smoothly as it now does across the beautiful waters of the Savannah, is the sincere wish of V. August 10, 1859. Such, my dear Dorothy, is the account of my wedding which took place so many years ago, and with it ends the first period of my life. My husband was a physician and as we were obliged, on account of his profession, to live in a central place, my father built us a lovely home in Robertville, which we occupied about three months before the war began. We moved there on December 21, 1860. Your precious mother was born March 1, 1861. It was a turbulent time; the feeling ran high between the North and the South, and we heard rumors of war, but it seemed too far away to invade our peaceful country. When your mother was five weeks old we took her to Charleston to show her to your grandfather s parents--an important visit, as she was the first grand-baby in the family and they were eager to see her. It was an all-day journey with a drive of twenty miles to the railway. We reached Charleston about eight o clock in the evening. My father-in-law met us, and after a warm greeting to the little stranger and ourselves, said, You are just in time to see the fight at Fort Sumter, for it...
