With the exception of the name for copper, which is Sanskrit, all the other words now given are native. Copper is evidently a foreign importation, for none exists, or rather none is worked within the Archipelago., Silyeris also an imported article, and I am at a loss to understand how it comes to have a. native name, both in Malay and Javanese, and these, too, very widely spread among remote languages. Iron, gold, and tin are abundant native products. Of the terms connected with the art of manufacturing clothTMTML tures.in of house-building, and of fishing, a numerous list might be produced, but the following will be sufficient: --Among these forty words there are but three which are not native,...
